Customer explains how it helped their business

'We as a Company delayed the need to modernise for some years, knowing that it would cause downtime and change to our operations. Then some of our customers started complaining that we were no longer competitive in relation to electronic information requirements, consequently we were losing business. We heard of FreeCargo and established a business relationship with them. The flexibility and service has been exemplary and we have been able to introduce new electronic information flows to our customers with little pain and anguish, and we have been able to incorporate the system with minimal change to our operations.'
